This Book Review is brought to you for free and open access by Northwestern University School of Law Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology by an authorized editor of Northwestern University School of Law Scholarly Commons.

Yet these, and many other fields, are part and parcel of the over-all picture of a correctional worker's daily routine. It is for this reason that the YEARBOOK is of outstanding value as a work of reference and information making these easily available and digestible, and therefore should be welcome to all practitioners in allied fields of social work, including criminology and criminal law.

In addition, there are several valuable appendices, as nearly complete as possible, such as directories of national governmental and voluntary agencies, with particulars about their purpose, activities, membership, and periodicals.

For those concerned, this is, perhaps, the cheapest encyclopedia that money can buy and one of the best!

Ernst Seelig is dead. The Monatsschrift für Kriminologie und Strafrechtsreform, vol. 39, no. 1/2, Jan., 1956, pp. 1-4, has an obituary by E. Mezger for Ernst Seelig who died on November 1, 1955. From 1928 to 1952, Seelig was Professor of Criminal Law, and from 1941 to 1952 Director of the Institute of Criminology, at the University of Graz (Austria) which had been made famous under the directorship of Hans Gross. Ernst Seelig who had studied under Gross, was the editor of the latest (eighth) edition of Gross' Handbuch der Kriminalistik, and with Edmund Mezger, co-editor of the organ of the Kriminalbiologische Gesellschaft, Kriminalbiologische Gegenwartsfragen. His Lehrbuch der Kriminologie (Graz, 1951) has been widely recognized and is perhaps most characteristic for his development of the "Typenproblem", based on Seelig's eight types of criminals which he originally presented in his Typen der Kriminellen (Berlin, 1949, with K. Weindler). Since 1952, Seelig had been Professor of Criminal Law at the new University of Saarbrücken. On the occasion of his 60th birthday a collection of his essays and articles was published in his honor under the title: Schuld, Sühne, Sexualität (Stuttgart, 1955).
