

1974

Editorial

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarlycommons.law.northwestern.edu/jclc>

 Part of the Criminal Law Commons, Criminology Commons, and the Criminology and Criminal Justice Commons

Recommended Citation

Editorial, 65 J. Crim. L. & Criminology 1 (1974)

This Editorial is brought to you for free and open access by Northwestern University School of Law Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology by an authorized editor of Northwestern University School of Law Scholarly Commons.

EDITORIAL

As the JOURNAL begins another year of publication, it behooves us to take stock of where we have been and where we are going. In the past year, we have adjusted to the departure of the police science section with what we hope has proved a more comprehensive emphasis upon criminal law and criminology. Thus our authors have included practicing lawyers, prosecutors, jurists, law professors, criminologists, sociologists, political scientists, psychologists and historians. In the same vein, we expanded the book review section and added article-length book reviews.

Effective with this issue, the JOURNAL will publish brief research notes in a section devoted to that purpose. In so doing, we hope to give an added dimension to the JOURNAL and to provide as much exposure as possible to the results of current research in criminal law, criminology and related fields.

We trust that our mild innovations will find favor with you and that this next year will prove as interesting as the last.

THE EDITORS