FORCIBLE RAPE: AN UPDATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

HUBERT S. FEILD* AND NONA J. BARNETT**

OVERVIEW

With the publication of a bibliography on forcible rape by Chappell, Geis and Fogarty, a useful guide to references (including sources published through 1973) was made available to those investigators interested in rape.<sup>1</sup> Since the compilation of their references, the literature dealing with various aspects of the crime has shown a phenomenal growth. The present updated bibliography (covering sources published since January, 1974) was prepared to provide a single reference source for the ever increasing array of material on rape.

An examination of the contents of this bibliography substantiates many of the trends in the published literature on rape noted by Chappell, Geis, and Fogarty. As can be seen, the popular literature has tended to have two central themes: (a) victims' resistance to a rape attack and (b) victims' reactions, both physical and psychological, to rape. From a legal perspective, the literature has reflected two prime concerns: the rights of the victim and the modification of state statutes concerning rape. Interestingly, there appears to have been somewhat of a shift in emphasis away from a concern for the legal rights of the defendant to those rights of the victim. The social sciences literature has continued to show a wide diversity of interests ranging from the treatment of an offender to an examination of jury members' attitudes toward an accused rapist. As might be expected, the areas of interest in this body of literature tend to be directed by the specific nature of the discipline; that is, psychology, sociology, or some other.

HOW TO USE THE BIBLIOGRAPHY

General format. In keeping with the format established by Chappell, Geis and Fogarty, the cited sources have been classified into seven major categories described in the section labeled "Contents". In some instances, the titles of the sources are not indicative of the content of the reference, and the use of the classification scheme should facilitate the location of appropriate citations.

The citations in the bibliography are consecutively numbered, and the inclusive citation numbers are presented for each section and subsection. Within these categories, the references are alphabetized by the senior author's last name or by title when no author is given. At the end of the bibliography, an alphabetized list of cited authors is presented along with the citation number(s) of their publication(s).

Cross references. Although the full citation is listed only once in the most appropriate subsection, cross references, listed by citation numbers, are also presented when the source has some relationship to a particular subsection. These cross reference numbers are given at the end of each subsection.

Author index. At the end of the bibliography, an alphabetized list of the authors cited in the references is provided. For each author, the citation number(s) of their publication(s) is listed.
